

HIGGINS HOUSE
(Maritime Museum)
St. Michaels
1854-1855

T-242

The Higgins House was built between 1854 and 1855 after Navy Point was subdivided into town lots in 1851. Until that time, the point was part of Perry Cabin (T-206), owned by Samuel Hambleton. The house is a two-story, two-bay frame structure with a smaller two-story, two-bay wing of the 1890s. There have been many owners, but the last private owner, John Higgins, gave his name to the building. Today it houses the curatorial offices of the Chesapeake Bay Maritime Museum.
